A subject is who or what the sentence is about. The predicate is the action the subject does in a sentence. The predicate always begins with a verb. You cannot write a complete sentence if you leave out a subject or predicate. Both the subject and and predicate are needed to express a complete thought. A sentence that is missing either a subject or predicate is called a sentence fragment. Most students struggle at an early age writing sentences with both a subject and predicate. We learn speaking and writing the letters and then move on to learning words. These words are then joined together to make meaningful sentences. This week, we bring to you these exercises for your students to learn about parts of sentences. Download the worksheet and get started. When we discuss how we construct sentences we find that every sentence is made up of two parts. It has a subject and a predicate. The subject is something or someone the sentence is about. The predicate is the part of the sentence that tells something about the subject. For example, in the sentence: Ram sings a song; Ram would be the subject, and 'sings a song' would be the predicate since it is the part that tells that Ram sings. Subject and Predicate Identification Practice Worksheet In the following exercises, students have to identify the subject and the predicate. They need to color the subject pink and the predicate blue. The first one is done for their ease. In the following exercise, students have to match the subject given under group 'a' with the predicates under group 'b' to make grammatically sound meaningful sentences. The worksheet provides several questions for students to practice. These basic exercises lay the foundation for students to write grammatically sound, elegant sentences. Download the worksheet and distribute it among the students. It is efficient if you ask them to write these sentences once they are finished matching each of these to ensure that they get enough practice. You can also refer to other worksheets for more exercises to teach them. You can find several such worksheets on our website. We aim to make teaching and learning an easy, fun, and fruitful process for both the students and teachers. Hence, we employ the use of the modern trends in teaching and upload several worksheets and flashcards on a wide variety of topics ranging from general awareness, science, mathematics, and more on a daily basis. All of our worksheets are printable and free. So be sure to visit our website for downloading flashcards and worksheets to teach your kids easily. Get started now!
